Elements of Well Designed Page

The common elements that can be found on most well designed pages include: header (often graphical), navigation or menu, body content, and footer. Each section serves an important but distinct purpose.

- Header -- site identity, purpose of document and its relation to other pages in the site

- Navigation (menu) -- organized and logical presentation of links to other pages

- Content -- information, images, products etc. (changes from page to page)

- Footer -- basic data about site (last updated, owner/creator and repeat of navigation links)